Graduating Fellow Zal Batmanglij was chosen by his peers to speak at the ceremony. The day's events were also attended by a delegation visiting from New Orleans, as a continuation of a collaboration between the AFI Conservatory and the University of New Orleans Department of Film, Theatre and Communication Arts (FTCA). The cultural exchange was initiated in late 2005, in response to the devastation of Hurricane Katrina. AFI faculty members and Fellows traveled to New Orleans to provide a series of lectures for FTCA students over a ten-week period.

The Franklin J. Schaffner Fellow Award, The Richard P. Rogers Spirit of Excellence Award and The William J. Fadiman Award for Screenwriting Fellows were given out to three AFI Fellows. These scholarships were established as part of The Sherrill C. Corwin Scholarship Program in honor of Sherrill C. Corwin, a founding AFI trustee and exceptional friend and supporter of AFI.

Director Barbara Stepansky was given The Franklin J. Schaffner Fellow Award of $15,000 – which includes a trip to the Sundance Film Festival – for her Thesis production, THE TROJAN COW. The honor is presented to an outstanding Directing Fellow as selected by a panel of distinguished jurors from the artistic community. The Franklin J. Schaffner Fellow Award was established in 1991, by Jean Schaffner in honor of her husband Franklin J. Schaffner, a longtime champion of AFI and chair of the AFI Conservatory Advisory Committee.

Director Anthony Leonardi was given The Richard P. Rogers Spirit of Excellence Award of $15,000 for EXISTENCE, his Thesis production. Awarded in memory of Richard P. Rogers — filmmaker, teacher, mentor and friend – who died in 2001, at the age of 57, this honor is conferred on a graduating Directing Fellow whose commitment to excellence and whose contribution to the class best exemplifies Rogers' spirit.

Screenwriting Fellow Ian Simpson received The William J. Fadiman Award for Screenwriting Fellows of $15,000 for his screenplay, MOTHER OF FRANKENSTEIN. The William J. Fadiman Award for Screenwriting Fellows is given to a Screenwriting Fellow who has shown outstanding achievement in screenwriting. The award is named in honor of William J. Fadiman, a distinguished and longtime story editor at Warner Bros. and MGM, and a member of the AFI faculty from 1974-1982.

This year also saw the inaugural presentation of the $7,500 narrative short film grant given by Animal Content in Entertainment, a division of The Humane Society of the United States. Awarded to a Thesis film's production team for bringing an engaging and imaginative perspective to an animal issue, this year's grant was conferred on Diana Romero for NINA QUEBRADA (BROKEN GIRL). Exploring the underground world of illegal prostitution rings in the US, the film focuses on the exploitation of a young Mexican girl juxtaposed with the cruelty of the multi-million dollar cockfighting industry.

Established in 1969, the AFI Conservatory is dedicated to identifying and nurturing future leaders of the moving image arts and profession through its five-semester, fully-accredited, Master of Fine Arts degree program that trains talented aspiring filmmakers using a hands-on curriculum focusing on narrative storytelling.
